The screenshot shows a code editor interface with the following details:

- Project Bar: Shows "SDL2-2.0.3" as the active project.
- File List: The "src" folder is expanded, showing sub-directories like "main", "power", "render", "stdlib", "test", "thread", "timer", "video", and "dummy".
- Current File: "SDL_nullframebuffer.c" is the active file.
- Code View: The code implements the `SDL_DUMMY_UpdateWindowFramebuffer` function. It includes a check for a surface pointer and handles environment variables. A tooltip for the `SDL_Surface` struct is displayed over the line `SDL_Surface *surface;`. The tooltip provides documentation from `SDL2-2.0.3.h`, stating: "A collection of pixels used in software blitting." It also includes a note: "This structure should be treated as read-only, except for pixels, which, if not NULL, contains the raw pixel data for the surface."
- Bottom Status Bar: Shows "SDL2 | Debug" and other standard build options.
